NMSU Library Has New Head of Technical Services, Documents Librarian

Ellen Bosman and Kirsten Clark recently joined the faculty of the NMSU Library. Ellen is the new head of the Technical Services Department. She received her B.A. in history from Calvin College in Michigan and her master's degree in library science from Indiana University. Ellen was the head of Technical Services at Indiana University's Northwest (IUN) campus for thirteen years. At IUN, she also taught classes in American history and a distance education library science course. She maintains several award-winning web pages related to her research on church libraries, library signage and transcultural nursing at <http://www.iun.edu/~libemb/>. Ellen is active in the American Library Association and she is currently under contract with Libraries Unlimited to produce a reference book. When not working, Ellen enjoys kayaking, snorkeling, bird watching and traveling.

Kirsten Clark is the new Government Documents Librarian in the Reference & Research Services Department. She was the documents librarian at St. John's University/College of St. Benedict in Minnesota for seven years, where she also did library instruction, reference and library systems/web site maintenance. Kirsten received a B.S. in chemistry from Illinois State University and a master's degree in library science from the University of Iowa. She recently completed a M.A. in history from St. Cloud State University. She looks forward to exploring New Mexico.
